

The Food Safety and Standards Authority of India (FSSAI), established under Food Safety and Standards Act (FSS Act), 2006 has been created for laying down science based standards for articles of food. It aims at regulate their manufacture, storage, distribution, sale and import, so as to ensure availability of safe and wholesome food for human consumption. FSSAI has been mandated by FSS Act 2006 so that the stakeholders in the food industry have a legal obligation to fulfil specific functions and thereby contribute towards the society. TUV India has played a vital role in implementing food safety by being a panel member of FSSAI.

TUV India is addressing this need by creating awareness in food safety and requirements of safety measures in food processing through innovative means and new technologies. In order to prevent microbial, chemical and other hazards in food by identifying them before its occurrence, TUV India recommends a preventive measure to correct these hazards by way of adopting the HACCP based approach to enhance food safety.

To create further awareness and add fuel to the growth of Indian food industry in area of food processing with special emphasis on Indian needs, TUV India will be participating in the "Indian Convention of Food Scientists and Technologists (ICFOST) - XXI, 2011" jointly with AFST (I) Pune chapter, CFTRI and DFRL Mysore, FICCI and CII, organized by The Association of Food Scientists and Technologists (India), CFTRI Mysore.

The theme of the convention is "Innovations in food science and technology: to fuel the growth of Indian Food Industry" as a two day programme on 20th and 21st January 2012 to be held at YASHADA, Rajbhavan, Pune. TUV India will be one of the eminent speakers among the scientists, technologists, food industries and Indian government technocrats and government officials from MOFPI, APEDA, CII, FICCI, NHB, FDA, BIS, ITC, MCCIA, machinery manufacturers etc.
